Preservationist of the Year

The Awards of Merit

Napa County Landmarks each year presents Awards of Merit to persons whose local projects have greatly enriched our architectural heritage and cultural landscape. This year, Landmarks is proud to recognize eight winners in four of five possible categories. Our ninth winner is our Preservationist of the Year, without whom two of this year's winning projects might never have been realized. The categories are:

1. Preservation or restoration of an existing historic building at least 50 years old. Preservation places a high premium on the retention of all historic fabric over time through conservation, maintenance, and repair. It reflects the building's continuum over time, through successive occupancies and the respectful changes that have been made. Restoration focuses on the retention of materials from the most significant time in a property's history, while permitting the removal of materials from another period.
2. Rehabilitation or adaptive reuse of an historic building. Rehabilitation emphasizes the retention and repair of historic materials, but more leeway for replacement is provided because it is assumed the property is more deteriorated prior to work. This category also allows for changes necessary to allow the historic structure to be put to a new use.
3. Construction of a new building, which is compatible with nearby existing historic structures. An example might be a new building erected in the midst of an historic neighborhood with care taken to harmonize with that neighborhood.
4. Cultural landscapes. The study, preservation or restoration of a natural or man-made landscape environment having particular historical significance, whether through its integral contribution to the context of a qualified property or district, or in its own right.
5. Cultural resource studies, reports, publications, programs and computer software. Creative, innovative, and precedent-setting approaches to technological and preservation planning issues, non-profit or government programs, educational awareness, or advancement.

Category 4 is a new recognition this year, and Landmarks is especially pleased to be able to honor both the Hoffman Farm and Faith Chapel in this context.

No detail was too small to escape Erik Nickel's notice. Compare the eaves and corbels (above right) to the rather flat and austere monochromatic treatment in the undated file photo (above right). A new garden gate invites one into a private oasis a world removed from the bustling urban life just outside.

He replumbed and rewired and made perhaps just one concession to 21st century living: he installed a new central heat and air system. Nickel also relandscaped. New white pickets inset into new brick columns define the Vallejo frontage and wrap around the corner on Brown to separate the residence from the rear garden area. A board and lattice fence ornamented with copper caps surrounds the intimate garden and integrates the detached two-car garage into the property. Roses invite the visitor up the front walkway and on to the porch, where an American flag flies each day.

Nickel's house is a case in point: it only takes one project "done right" to get neighbors thinking about improving their own homes. The scaffolds are up, and other projects have begun. Look for the St. John's District to exemplify a preservation renaissance in the foreseeable future.

- Leslie Erickson

The Schuppert House, Napa

Owner: Erik Nickel

The Schuppert House on the northeast corner of Vallejo and Brown Streets is an Italianate Victorian built around 1875 in what today is known as the St. John's District. It was the home of Joseph Schuppert, who owned a billiards room and saloon on Brown Street approximately where the Mervyn's complex is today. The house is included in the 1978 Historic Resources Inventory, and thus may be eligible for the California Register. The following description is from the Inventory, when Phillip and Lucille Trussell owned the house:

The elaborate and complicated brackets supporting the eaves of the Schuppert House give character to this simple rendition of the often formal Italianate style of the 1870s. The house is a fine example and one of the few Italianate houses in this area of Napa. The two-story hip roofed house with shiplap siding is rectangular and has the characteristic symmetry of first and second story windows above each other and the door to the side. Note particularly the delicate turned balusters of the porch railing, which may have been an addition of the 1880s. The windows have molded lintels and an unusual molded lugsill supported by paired brackets. A sawn decorative caps the second floor central window.

Erik Nickel (he of the Nickel and Nickel Vineyards restoration of the John C. Sullenger House) bought the house from Lucille Trussell's estate and closed escrow in October 2001. He has done a beautiful restoration job. Nickel gutted the house and raised it to build a new foundation. He then repaired the original windows, moldings and doors before reinstalling each in its original place. The floors too are original. The configuration of the rooms is the same, and they retain many 19th century details, including the two fireplaces.
